SkyMUN 2025: Promoting responsible consumption and production patterns in order to increase equality and grow closer to a greener future

We as a society overconsume everyday. From useless tiktok trends to fast fashion. People often don't realize where their products come from. Most of the time we overlook how our products are actually made. Fast fashion is mass produced in factories in the Global South in countries like China, Vietnam, India and Bangladesh in terrible work environments. Products like this are often produced with the use of modern slavery, due to the low labor costs in these countries. Change is necessary, to stop the overconsumption and unethical production. To dissolve the gap between lower and middle class, we have to address and solve these issues. That is why "Promoting responsible consumption and production patterns in order to increase equality and grow closer to a greener future" is the theme of SkyMUN 2025. We hope to find solutions to all the topics, and a lot of fruitful debate.
